THE PREFACE.

PREFACE.

THE situation of Newbattle is of that kind which the Cistercians most of all affected. The South Esk, escaped from the green hills of Temple and the woody ravines of Dalhousie, widens its valley a little to give room for a long range of fair level 'haughs.' At the very head of these meadows, and close to the brook, the Abbey stands. Behind, to the north, are the remains of the ancient monkish village, once occupied by the hinds and shepherds of the convent, but separated from the Abbey gardens by a massive stone wall, ascribed to the time and the personal care of William the Lion,¹ which still forms the boundary of the park on that side. Across the little river the bank rises abruptly, broken into fantastic ravines, closely wooded, which only upon examination are discovered to be the remains of the ancient coal-workings of the monks, of a period when the operation was more a sort of quarrying than like modern coal-mining. The Abbey was not placed to command a prospect. The river banks have probably always been covered with a growth of native oak. What was the clothing of the level lawn of old we can only conjecture. As it is, situated at the bottom of its narrow valley, close by the brook, hidden among beeches and venerable sycamores, it gives an idea of religious seclusion, such as saint Bernard sought at Cîteaux.¹

The Abbey was founded in the year 1140, according to the chronicle or in 1141, as is affirmed in a charter in the following collection,² the great founder of Scotch churches, King David I., for monks of the Cistercian order, brought, it is said, from Melrose

The first abbot was RALPH,³ apparently the leader of the colony from Melrose. Father Hay, not speaking loosely, after his usual manner, but evidently founding on some monastic authority which has not been preserved to us, narrates the numerous privileges and gifts which this abbey obtained for his convent, and his consecration of a cemetery within the precinct of the monastery.⁴ The Abbot, he says, 'was a person of beautiful presence. He was continually occupied in divine meditation; for, from his youth he had loved his Creator with all his heart. It is said that once, while he was engaged in prayer in his cell, the devil appeared to him, blacker than pitch.' Abbot Ralph assisted at the settlement of a controversy concerning the Crag of Trevelen, between the Abbots Holyrood and Kelso, some time before the year 1150.⁵ In the last year of the pontificate of Innocent II., he obtained a bull confirming to Neuhottle the general Cistercian privilege of immunity of lands in their own occupation from tithes, and ratifying the grants already made the new abbey, especially those of King David and his son, Earl Henry. Of his death we have no record.

ALFRED,² whose name, usually written Alured, is frequently corrupted into AMERIDUS, was the second abbot. From the authority used by Father Hay, we learn that he brought into the abbey many relics of Saints, which he inclosed in a silver chest. He adorned the chapter-house with handsome seats, and also erected proper stalls with convenient desks or menologies of wood in the cloisters on the side where the 'collation' or reading of the lives of Saints was held, for the use of the brethren during the reading of collation before compline at the washing of feet at Maunday.³ Charters of Richard, Bishop of St Andrews, are witnessed by Geoffry, Abbot of Dunfermlin; John, Abbot of Holyrood; Roger, Abbot of Driburg; with Amfred, Abbot of Neubotle, in full synod, in the church of St Cuttiberi at Edinburgh.⁴ This abbot assisted at the synod of the clergy of the diocese in 1173,⁵ and died on the 14th of the kalends of September 1179.⁶ HUGH, the prior, was elected abbot in his place. ³ As I am doubtful of my translation, I transcribe the passage.—Capitulum item honestis sedibus decoravit, et in claustro, de parte collationis, honesta sedilia cum convenientibus pulpitis seu menologiis ligneis pro usu fratrum tempore lectionis collationis ante completorium mandati, seu lotionis pedum, fecit. I cannot doubt that claustrum, though sometimes used for the monastery generally, here means the cloisters; and we know that in some churches the cloisters were fitted up with stalls or carrels on one side, for the purpose here expressed. Menologia must have received their name from being used in reading the lives of saints and martyrs, called, from their distribution into months, menologies. The completorium, or compline, is the last service of the day. Maunday (Maundy) is a familiar phrase for the service of foot-washing on the eve of Good Friday, when the choir sang—Mandatum novum do vobis, ut alii alios diligatis; sicut dilexi vos, ut eos etiam diligatis alii deos.

of the year 1180, Hugh, Abbot of Neubottle, was one of William's court at Haddington, when the King 'made peace' between the monks of Melrose and the De Morevils, the lords of Lauderdale, concerning their rights in the forest between Gala and Leader.¹ About the year 1190 he was delegated by the Pope, along with John, Bishop of Dunkeld, and Symon, Archdeacon of Glasgow, to decide a controversy that had arisen between the Abbey of Kelso and the Rector of Lilsclene; and, in the year 1193, he acted in the same capacity, along with the Bishop of Dunkeld, and the Abbot of Holyrood, in a dispute between the canons of Jedburgh and Adam Fitzgilbert, concerning the chapel of Hotou.² The delegates disposed of both questions in decrees which, for their brevity, are worthy of imitation.³ Abbot Hugh was present at a great assembly of the clergy at which King William assisted in person, when the church of Hassenden was bestowed on Melrose by the King and Jocelin Bishop of Glasgow, between whom it had been in controversy.⁴ In 1195 he negotiated, on behalf of his convent, a convention with Walter, Prior of St Andrews, regarding the tithes of the Neubottle lands in the parish of Haddington.⁵ After he had governed the house for twenty-two years, he resigned the office in 1201,⁶ setting an example which was followed by many of his successors.

ADAM, master of the lay brethren, was next made abbot. He witnessed a charter of Seyer de Quinci, Earl of Wynton, to the monks of Dunfermlin, of the land of Dunkeir.⁷ Adam retired from his dignity in 1213.⁸

ALAN, the sub-prior of Melrose, succeeded him, but, in the next year, resigned his abbacy, and retired to his old cloister on the 8th of the kalends of June 1214.¹

RICHARD, the cellarer, succeeded to Alan, and, like him, retired from the abbacy on the 6th of the kalends of August 1216.²

ADAM de Harearres, the cellarer, was placed in the Abbot's chair on the 13th of the kalends of September 1216. He was one of the Cistercian abbots who went to Yor^l. to have the national interdict removed, in 1218. In the following year, on the 8th of the ides of August, he was elected to the greater abbacy of Melros, and died in 1245.³

RICHARD, the master of the lay brethren, was elected Abbot of Neubotle in 1219, and died on the nones of April 1220.⁴

Another RICHARD, who had been prior of the convent, was elected Abbot in his room. He was abbot when the young king, Alexander II., was received in the abbey on the 19th of May 1223.⁵ His seal, among the Melrose charters, is a small oval, having his own figure, with a crozier in his left hand, and for legend—sigillum abbatis de neubotle. It is now perhaps impossible to fix which of the three abbots bearing the name of Richard was the party to the very curious compact with the Malherbes, lords of Morham, concerning the water-courses for their respective mills of Morham and Beresford.⁶

The last Richard was succeeded by CONSTANTINE, in whose time, apparently, was the dedication of the Church performed by Andrew de Moravia, Bishop of Moray, on the 3d of the ides of March 1233.⁷ This abbot, like so many of his predecessors, retired from the duties of his office in 1236.⁸

The next abbot was ROGER, previously the cellarer of the Abbey of Melrose. It is noted that, in the incumbency of this abbot, Robert de Keldelach, Abbot of Dunfermlin, and Chancellor of Scotland, being obliged to relinquish his office and abbacy for his share in the Durward plot, retired as a monk into the Abbey of Neubottle in 1252, and there continued till 1269, when he was chosen Abbot of Melros, and ruled that great monastery till his death, which took place in 1273, ‘non sine magna sanctitatis opinione.’ Abbot Roger of Neubottle assisted at the conference between Henry III. of England and the young king Alexander III. of Scotland, at Roxburgh, on the 20th September 1255. He attended a chapter of his order held in England, and, on his return towards Scotland, died at the monastery of Vaudey in 1256.¹

WILLIAM, the prior, was chosen abbot in his stead. He became bound to pay a half mark yearly to the nuns of North Berwick, as the rent of the land in Leith and Greenside, the old gift of the lords of Restalric to the nunnery, now transferred to the convent of Neubottle.² He, with consent of his chapter, granted to Adam Hunter the hereditary office of ‘sergeantry’ in all causes touching life and limb throughout the abbey land of Craufurd.³ William resigned the abbacy in 1259.⁴

ADAM, cellarer of Melrose, succeeded, being inducted, and perhaps consecrated, abbot of Neubottle, on St Vincent’s day, 1259. He was unanimously elected to be abbot of his old convent of Melrose, and installed there on the day of St Peter ad vincula (August 1), 1261.⁵

His successor at Neubottle was GUIDO, previously the porter of the abbey, who held the abbacy from 1261 till 1269, when he resigned his office.⁶

⁶ Chron. Mailr. We have already had more than one instance of the monk becoming abbot who previously had held the important office of cellarer, a functionary who, in some monasteries,

PATRICK is said to have been the next Abbot, and to have held the office till 1272.¹

WALTER is said to have succeeded; but if this is correct, he must have been Abbot for a very short time.²

WALDEVE, a monk and cellarer of Melros, became Abbot in 1273, or sooner, of whom we only find it recorded in the chronicle of Melros, that 'Dan Waldeve, of pious memory and holy conversation, Abbot of Neubotle, going the way of all flesh, with blessed end departed to the Lord, leaving his house in full peace and excellent condition, both in its spiritual and its temporal affairs, in the third year of his government, on the 31d day of February 1275; whose body was interred with due reverence, as became one holding the office of Father Abbot, on the eve of Agatha Virgin and Martyr'—that is, on the day following his death.

Who succeeded to Abbot Waldeve is not ascertained. The Abbot of Neubotle attended the parliament at Briggeham, 17th March 1289, but his name is not recorded. The next who occurs in transactions by name is JOHN, who takes the modest style of 'Brother John, called Abbot of seems to have had charge of the whole commissariat, superintending the supplies and distribution of every kind of provision. The Porter, portarius, was also a personage of consequence in the monastery, perhaps from his presiding over the distribution of alms which was made at the gate. This seems to explain gifts made to the gate of a monastery, and penalties declared payable to the Porter (as in No. 160, 181, 182), that is, for the poor who were there supplied. In several monasteries, a portion of land was appropriated to the Porter. At Paisley, this office and land seem to have got into the hands of laymen, and to have become hereditary. The descendants of John, the porter, inheriting the 'porter-field,' naturally took their surname from their office, until territorial surnames came into fashion, when they lengthened it into 'Robertus Porterfeld de eodem,' the founder of a family of consideration in Renfrew. Many families, in different parts of Scotland, owe their names to similar tenure of office. It is more likely that the name of Durward, still common round Arbroath, is derived from the office of door-ward of the abbey, than that so many descendants in humble life remain of the great family who had their surname from being Ostarii Regis. The name of Usher, and perhaps our Scotch Wischard, represent the French shape of the same official designation, Huissier.

Neubotle, on Friday before the feast of the nativity of St John Baptist, 1292.¹ He did homage to Edward I. in person, in the Castle of Edinburgh, on July 29 of that year; and again, in that king's plen parliament held at Berwick upon Tweed, Abbot John did homage, and renounced the French alliance, along with a multitude of other churchmen of Scotland, on the 28th day of August, and had mandates for restitution of all the Abbey lands on the 2d of September 1296.² A small oval counter-seal of his, or of the Abbey in his time, is in the chapter-house, Westminster. It is simply a hand grasping a crozier, circumscribed, + contra - de - neubotel.

GERVASE was Abbot of Neubotle in 1312. On the feast of St Lawrence, in that year, 'Brother Gervase, called Abbot of Neubotle,' with the consent of his convent and of William, Abbot of Melros, settled for ever on the infirmary of the Abbey (Infirmatorium monachorum) an annual rent of three marks, payable by William Byseth out of the lands of Merton, to be expended for the uses of the sick and the recreation of the feeble.³ He assisted at the parliament at Cambuskenneth in 1314, in which all who had died in war against Bruce, and those who, being alive, had not come to his faith and peace, were disinherited and declared enemies of the king and realm. He was also present in the parliament at Ayr in 1315, where the succession to the crown was settled on Edward Bruce, and, failing him, on Marjory; and was present at a great meeting of churchmen, held at his own abbey, where the terms of the exchange of the churches of Nenthorn and Cranston were settled, between the Bishop and William of Alyncreon, Abbot of Kelso, on the 2d and 19th days of March 1316.⁴ On the 16th of July 1316, by the mediation of the diocesan, Abbot Gervase settled an old dispute between his convent and the canons of Holyrood, taking the church and church-land of Bathcat, and the tithes of the land and salt-works of Preston, in lieu of the 65 marks 20 pence of rent due by the canons as tenants of the Abbey sub-works in the case of Kildentir. This exchange gave rise, four years later, to an arrangement of the small tithes of Preston with the perpetual Vicar of Tranou, also concluded by Gervase.¹ He continued in the office till 1323, in which year he witnessed a charter of Sir Simon Locard of Lee granted to William de Lyndesay, a great church beneficiary and lord of great temporal possessions.²

WILLIAM was abbot in the year 1328. On Wednesday after the feast of St Denis and his companions (October 9) 1328, he received a charter of warranty from David de Lyndesay, Lord of Craufurd, the hereditary friend of his house.³ In the following year William de Malville, Lord of Malville, ratified in his favour a charter of his grandsire Gregory de Malville, A. 1264, granting to the monks of Neubotle free passage through his lands of Retrevin with their cattle and carriages travelling between the monastery and their Clydesdale lands, with right to unyoke their cattle and pasture them on his lands where needful, saving corn and meadow. The 'reddendo' for this licence was a new waggon loaded with timber yearly, namely, such a waggon as the monks built for their own use in Clydesdale.⁴ On the 30th May 1335, he and the Prior of Holyrood were at York, and had letters of safe conduct on their return to Scotland; and two days of the collarer, ten shillings yearly; and was to have no claim against the monks or their men inhabiting the grange and town of Preston, and the territory of the grange. The monks were to enjoy all the other tithes whether they cultivated the said grange with their own hands or let it to others, namely, the tithe of wool, lambs, cows, calves, colts, pigs, geese, hens, and of all other goods, moveable and immoveable, and all other tithes, real and mixed.

later, both had letters of protection from Edward III. for their convents.¹ William was still Abbot of Newbottle on the Sunday next before the feast of the nativity of the blessed Virgin, in the year 1344.²

In the year 1345, Pope Clement VI. issued a commission for ascertaining and vindicating the privileges of the Cluniac monks, intrusted, in Scotland, to the abbots for the time, of Duffennin, Cupar, and Newbottle. Under that commission there were various proceedings had by the Cluniac house of Paisley, which bring us acquainted with the names of three, apparently, successive abbots of Newbottle.

On the 27th November 1351, ANDREW, Abbot of Newbottle, was acting as Papal Jndex and conservator under that commission.³ On the 14th September (the feast of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross) of that year, Abbot Andrew granted in feu ferm to Simon de Dayntre the teneant in Leith, held of the nuns of North Berwick.⁴

WILLIAM was Abbot of Newbottle, and acting in the same capacity in the affairs of Paisley on 30th May 1362.⁵

HUGH, Abbot of Newbottle, was discharging the same duties on the 20th day of August 1367.⁶ His seal—a small oval, giving only a crozier under a niche—is affixed, among those of the other peers and prelates, to the parliamentary recognition of the right of John Earl of Carrie to succeed to his father's crown, A. 1371. Hugh, Abbot of Newbottle, appends his seal to a charter of Thomas de Tripnay, granting to Alan de Landre the lands of le Plate, Westhall, and Northraw, in the barony of Rathow, A. 1379;⁷ and to a charter of 'Thomas Trypnay dominus de la Seoystoun,' granted to Alexander de Ramyssay of Dalwolsy, making him baillie of all his lands within the kingdom of Scotland, dated March 31,

1381.¹ A charter of ten ferm, granted by Abbot Hugh to John Murcheson, of a tenement in Chail, stipulates a rediende of 2000 fermings, good and dry, yearly, wamey, 1000 of the 'take' of St Peter ad vincula (1st August) the rest of the laird's take, payable at the port of Muskilburgh, or at 'our Grange of Preston.'²

All the chroniclers agree that Nebothle shared the fate of the other churches in the inglorious expedition of Richard II. and his uncle, John of Gaunt, into Scotland in 1385, when they marked their progress by the ruins of burned abbeys and monasters, while the castles remained unassailed.³

The account given of the destruction of the Abbey of Nebothle by Father Hay has all the appearance of being drawn from some record of the abbey. "In the year 1385," he says, "the English burnt the monastery of Nebothle and at the same time, several of the granges and farms⁵ of the monastery were destroyed, and the others were deserted, while the lands were left uncultivated. The towers or peels,⁶ built by the monastery for protection against English marauders, faced in the same way. Some of the monks were carried away prisoners; others fled to other monasteries. The few who remained in the abbey having scarce sufficient food, were compelled, by great distress, to sell twenty-nine excellent chalices,¹ nine crosses of exquisite workmanship, and other sacred ornaments, with their silver household plate. At that time, the greater part of the abbey tower was ruined by the falling of the cross.² Then, too, the ancient discipline of the order, through the injury of wars and the decay of rents, began to decline, and an entrance was afforded for women at the side of the choir and the high altar. But a few years before, I find, from the book of receipts and expenses, the annual income of the monastery could maintain eighty monks and seventy lay brethren, with the corresponding establishment.³

The seal of the convent in 1386, is an oval, of shrine work. Under a niche is a churchman standing, holding a crozier in his right hand. Above, are the crowned Virgin and Child. Augustin Hys's minute knowledge of the history of Neubotle may be accounted for to some extent by his acquaintance with the Roslin papers. But he may have had access also to some records at Neubotle which seem now to be lost. In 1790, the Marquis of Lothian wrote to General

Hutton—"A fire that took place some years ago, destroyed, as I understood, several books at Newbattle Abbey, so that probably some records might have been destroyed."—*Hutton's Col. Adc. Libr. and heir of archbishop Thomas de Bechipney of Hereford, one of the assessor made by the quadrature to Alan de Landreville of Hereford. He was abbot in 1408 or 1409.

WILLIAM MURPHY was 210th abbot of Newbold, appointed in October 1413 and on the 23rd of September 1416.

WILLIAM HYNOT was Abbot in 1417.

PATRICK Midwate, Beauchamp's man, was elected abbot of Newbold as early as the year 1400, for in 1410 he is recorded by Thores to be entered in the Abbey Register as a man of 50 years of age, and that he had recovered for his abbey from the monks' hands in his own time, during the space of ten years.⁴ The earliest of these titles is dated in 1408, but the name of Patrick as abbot is not found in an instrument of the 1 April 1462.⁵ Abbot Patrick was assise in the latter reign, and was present in parliament, and frequently acted as one of the royal justices, both in holding and continuing parliament, as well as on the several occasions of Parliament.⁶ On the 14th October 1466 he obtained a writ of the Lord Auditors against James Lord Harborton, where one of the articles charged him of 1000 stone of lead or more of his abbey lands in Hereford. Patrick was still abbot on the 19th day of February 1471.⁷

In the list of members incorporated in the University of Bologna in the year 1474 is found 'A venerabilis Pater in Christi fidei Universitate Altorum monasterii de Newboldi' and, in the same year Patrick Starbuck, a monk of his abbey.⁸ On the 18th January 1479 Joux was Abbot of Newbold.⁹ He restored the buildings and adorned the church and the altars; and, being unwilling that his good deeds should be overlooked by posterity, he put up his arms over his several works.¹ Abbot John granted a feu-charter of a tenement in Edinburgh on the 25th of April 1482.²

ANDREW was Abbot of Neubottle on July 4, 1494;³ and the same person occurs as abbot in 1499 and 1500.⁴

JOHN was the name of the Abbot of Neubottle in 1512 and in 1520.⁵

On the 22d April 1526, King James V. was at the Abbey, and there granted to the abbot and convent a right of constructing a harbour on their lands of Preston Grange, which was ratified in parliament.⁶

EDWARD Shewill was Abbot of Neubottle in 1526⁷ and in 1528. In the latter year, Edward Abbot of Neubottle granted to Hugh Douglas a feu-charter of the lands of Craighouse, which is subscribed by the abbot and twenty-four monks of the convent.⁸

JAMES was Abbot in 1531. On the 5th of February of that year he entered into a contract with the monks of Dumfermlin, which affords perhaps the earliest information regarding the details of coal-mining, and of the relations of contiguous coal owners. So far as can be learned with our imperfect acquaintance with antique engineering terms, it seems to import generally that the Abbot of Neubottle, in consideration of a large sum (18 score marks), undertook to work his coal of Preston Grange, or to drive conduits through it, in such a manner as to give passage for the water from the Abbot of Dumfermlin's coal fields of Juveresk and Poble to the sea.⁹ This abbot's name appears in the rolls as one of the royal commissioners for continuing parliament in 1533, and again on the 18th July 1539.¹⁰

JOHN was the name of the Abbot of Newbottle on 10th December 1540.¹

JAMES Hasmall was abbot on 13th March 1542. He was one of the royal commissioners to parliament in 1544; witnessed the destruction of his monastery by the troops of the Earl of Hertford;² and was still abbot and attending his duty in parliament on April 12, 1554.³

The next abbot was MARK KER, the second son of Sir Andrew Ker of Gosford. The date of his election is not accurately ascertained. On the 22d of May 1555, being indicted in the High Court of Justiciary for hurting and wounding several of the French troops then serving in Scotland, in some affray which had taken place at Newbottle in April preceding, Master Mark Ker appeared in person, 'and desired to be repledged as he that was ane kirkman to his Juge ordinaire.' Then ensued a curious dispute between the officials of Glasgow and St Andrews, each claiming jurisdiction in the case. The right of Glasgow seems to have rested only on Ker holding benches in that diocese. The accused plainly preferred the Archbishop of St Andrews for his judge; perhaps expecting that Hamilton would look more leniently upon his violence committed against French troops than the zealous Beaton. Mr James Balioure, afterwards well known as Sir James Balioure, then official of the archdeaconry of Lothian, claimed the accused to his court, 'he resoun he hes productit ane testimoniall of his order of crownebennet herand that he was scolare in the dyoce of Sanctandrois, and als allegit that he was born within the said dyoce in the castell of Edinburgh, and maid residence certinwallie within the samin dyoce, viz., within the place and town of Newbottle or Edinburgh; and als that the allegit cryme he wes to be accusit of wes committit within the said dyoce of Sanctandrois.' plea, Mark Ker immediately demitted his benefice of the Maisondieu of Jedburgh. The official found caution that he should minister justice, but we hear nothing more of the case.¹ 'Mark Kar' is found among the lords and barons who subscribed the 'contract to defend the liberty of the evangell of Christ' at Edinburgh on the 27th day of April 1560. He is styled 'Commendator of Neubotle' in the roll of the members of the parliament on 1st August 1560, who ratified and approved the Confession of Faith.² In 1563, he was one of the Lords for administering the Act of Oblivion.³ He was named second in the commission appointed by parliament in 1567 to consider what points 'should appertain to the jurisdiction, privilege, and authority of the kirk.' In 1571 he was chosen to be of the king's privy council; in 1574 appointed by the Estates one of a commission for 'putting in form the ecclesiastical policy and order of the governing of the kirk as they shall find most agreeable to the truth of God's word, and most convenient for the estate and people of this realm.' In 1578 he was one of the commissioners named to report upon the 'bukik of the policie of the kirk;' in 1581, one of those for ordering stipends for the reformed clergy; for reducing hospitals, maisondieus, and almshouses to the order of their first foundation, according to the mind and intention of their godlie founders.⁴ 'The right venerable' Mark, commendator of Neubotle, continued through his remaining life to take a prominent part in the civil and ecclesiastical affairs of the country. A fine head of him, painted by Sir Antonio More in 1551, hangs at Newbattle Abbey. The Commendator married Helen Leslie of Rethes, and died in 1584.

His son, Mark Ker, Master of Requests, was provided to the Abbaey of Neubotle by Queen Mary during his father's life, in 1567, and had a ratification, of that grant, under the great seal, upon his death in 1584. On the 28th July 1587 two charters in his favour passed the great seal, both ratified in parliament the next day. The first granted to him in heritage the superiority of the lands of Prestoungrange and Sowtereloute, in Haddington; Eisthouse and Westhouse, Morphat-toun, Huntlawcoit, Toksydeluil, Coitlaw, and Gledhous, in Edinburgh; Lethinghoipis, in Peblis; all united into the barony of Prestoungrange. The other gave to him and his heirs in property the manor and town of Newbottill, a piece of land adjoining, called the Anna, the lands of Bryanchapell, Maistertoun and Newbyris, Southsyde, Coittis Eister and Wester, Mains of Dalhoussye (except the manse and glebe reserved for the minister of the kirk), Todhoillis, Gilmertougrange, Craighouse, Nether Currie, Heringden, Mauldislie, Toksydhoill, Toksyde Nether, a quarter of Toksydhill, Sparlands, and Kirklandhill, in Edinburgh; Salt Prestoun, the harbour of Aitchesonis haven, Cowthroppall, Barfund, Easter and Wester Monkkriggis, Coitwallis, Curleris croft, Puro, and Fenton, in Haddington; Kynnard, in Stirling; the church lands of Bathcat, in Linlithgow; Williameshoip, Romannograng and Flewlands, Cowlcoit, and Eister and Wester Denishous, in Peblis; the barony of Craferdwure or Friernure, Shortcleuel, Glenunquhair, Paudoven, Fingland, Smythwod and Cownie, Over and Nether Glengouar, Glencappill, Glengiecht, the barony of Monkland, Auchingray, Garthsebarrymanis, Crumlat, Blaiklands, Caldercruikis, Arbouchling, Pedlarisburn, Brounsyde, Fockene, Gaithlie, Ronschello, Airdrie, Ryyardis, Coittis and Garturk, Nether Coittis, Coittis and Overhous, Dundovan, Haggis, Ryden, Drumgray, Soutarhous, Kirkwod and Drumpendar, Padovane, Denbank, Gilgairt, Ardmoyeis, Kackling croft, Gartwerrie and Gartluskan, Gartmyllane, Inschennok and Gayne, Mydrois, Mywat, Gartingawok, Blairlynes Eister and Wester, Myddiltoun, Glenmuill, Glencoris, Rouchsoillis, Kipbyre, Brydenhill, Kippis and Holnehirst, in Lanark; tenements in Edinburgh, Leith, Linlithgow, Haddington, Crail:—all formerly the temporality of the monastery of Neuboth, united and erected into the barony of Neuboth; with the patronages of the rectory and vicarage of the church of Neubotil, the rectory and vicarage of Hereot, the rectory and vicarage of Cokpen, the rectory and vicarage of Batheat: suppressing the monastery, so that they shall form no part of its patrimony, and that no memory remain hereafter of the monastery or of the monastic life.¹ On the 15th of October 1591, Mark Kerr had a charter under the great seal uniting these baronies into one lordship, to be called the Lordship of Neubottle, erected into the estate and honour of a Lord of Parliament, which was ratified in parliament 1592. The common seal of the abbey of the time of this commendator, perhaps the same used by his father, is still preserved. It is a brass oval stamp, imitating the design of the older one described above. On the right side is the shield of Scotland: on the other, supported on a crozier, the shield of Kerr—on a cheveron, three stars; in base, a unicorn's head; and under the shield, the initials M. K. The Register of Neubottle, now preserved in the library of the Faculty of Advocates, was acquired by purchase in 1723.² Of its intermediate custody since the dissolution of the convent and the consequent dispersion of the abbey muniments, nothing is certainly known.³ The register consists of eighty-seven leaves of vellum of a small folio size (ten inches by seven), which have been rebound since its acquisition by the Advocates Library, and somewhat injured both by paring the edges and by misplacing some of the leaves.⁴ The MS., which, for the most part is in a hand of the end of

⁴ The first five leaves contain the 'tabula,' which it has been thought proper to print here, adding references to the pages of the printed volume. The latter part of it, consisting of the table of the bulls, gives a long notice of the contents of each, which has been omitted. After the 'tabula,' three leaves, interposed, have been used for registering writs omitted in the body of the Record, and the contents of these have been printed according to their subjects and dates. With the ninth leaf, as the volume now stands, begins the proper ancient book of register of the abbey.

the fourteenth century, is crowded and not neatly written, but exhibits more attention to correctness of names and the order of the charters than is commonly found in such records. The writer of the body of the register has indeed left evidence of the care he bestowed on his task in frequent notes on his margins and explanations of his arrangement in his table of contents; and all of these which possessed any interest have been preserved in the print. The order of the original, so far as it was found to follow any arrangement, has been adopted; and it was only the contents of those interpolations and added leaves which are found in all such collections, that have been here thrown together and simply placed in chronological order. The charters in the Register are without titles. Those here given are, for the most part, supplied from the 'Tabula' of the original scribe. Every charter, entry, and note of the Register of Neubotle is here printed, without using any liberty with the mode of writing and spelling of the record, except where it is superseded by the extant original charter.

The interest of the work, it is hoped, as well as its authority, is considerably which continues for fifty-nine leaves, (broken only by an interpolation of three leaves in the middle of a charter, between fol. 33 and fol. 34,) of which the last eleven leaves consist of Papal bulls. This part of the volume, being the original register, has been printed continuously (pp. 1-229). After it, one leaf is again interposed, of miscellaneous entries.

Hitherto, the writing of the MS. though not uniform, does not vary much in style or age. The interpolated leaves are in as old a hand as the proper register, and the whole is plainly of the fourteenth and beginning of the fifteenth centuries, with the exception of a very few documents entered subsequently in spaces accidentally left blank.

At the end of the proper register have been printed the various entries contained on the interposed leaves above mentioned. These, in the original, do not pretend to any arrangement of subject or date; but, in printing, the Roman bulls have been placed first in order, and after them, the other mixed contents of the interposed leaves, according to their order of date or time. (Pp. 224-242.)

After the proper register and one interposed leaf of nearly contemporary writing, it is noted at fol. 70, that the part immediately following was entered in the register in the year 1476, by direction of Abbot Patrick, who had recovered the various possessions, of which the titles do not were there recorded. That part occupies eleven leaves; and, after it, there are five leaves of mixed charters of late date. The contents of these sixteen leaves are printed from p. 243 to p. 320.

increased by the selection of original charters added to it.¹ The greater portion of these are from the charter-room at Newbattle Abbey, and the Club is indebted for their use to the liberality of the Marchioness of Lothian. A few have been derived from other sources, and, in particular, several of much interest are printed from the collections of W. E. Aytoun, Esq. Where one of these extant charters was found to have been entered in the Register, it has been printed in its place in the body of the work, but adopting in all cases the precise readings of the original charter. The charters in the course of the work so printed from originals are each distinguished with an asterisk, on the margin, and are also noted in the prefixed Tabula. It will be found that, though the registered copy generally gives the operative words with great correctness, several omissions in it, especially of the names of witnesses, are supplied by printing from the charters themselves: and inaccuracies of spelling are corrected.²

The other articles of the Appendix, taken from successive accounts and valuations of the Abbaey under the Acts of Parliament for appropriating a

² Thus, in the charter of Henry de Graham, No. 8, five witnesses—all those between Norman Fitz Bertulf and the last in the list—are omitted in the copy engrossed in the register, and are printed here from the finely preserved original.

The charter of David I. No. 17, with its interesting marches, has been, in like manner, printed from the original, and thus the spelling of places, as used in the twelfth century, has been recovered, instead of the fashion of the fourteenth.

In the charter of William the Lion, No. 20, the ancient spelling has been also restored, and five witnesses (all those between Robert de Quinci and Simon Fraser), whose names had been omitted by the charterary scribe

The charter of Thomas de Lastalrich terminates in the register—'Testibus H. de Sigillo clerico regis et aliis innumeris; but the fine original at Newbattle gives the 'innumerable' witnesses as printed, No. 43.

In the general confirmation of Alexander II. No. 122, the ancient spelling has been restored, and all the witnesses after the chancellor, who were omitted by the charterary scribe.

Thus, also, all the witnesses have been recovered in No. 144, of whom only three are given in the register, and in No. 157, of whom only one.

A few peculiarities of the scribe must not be ascribed to the printer or editor. Thus he consistently chooses to spell sicut, sicud, and the word abbreviated stands sic^o.

third of religious benefices to the maintenance of the reformed clergy and the general purposes of the state, serve in some degree to show the possessions and rents of the house at the period of the Reformation, and for a considerable time afterwards. They have an additional interest, in showing the number of tenants, and the mode of occupation of some, at least, of the Abbey estates.

Though Neubottle was not one of the most richly endowed monasteries of Scotland, the Abbey possessed great estates in six counties, Edinburgh, Haddington, Linlithgow, Canark, Peebles, and Stirling. To trace these possessions from the original grants, or to continue their history from the Abbey to the modern holders, however interesting, is beyond the scope of a preface. Scarcely a charter of this volume but gives us early information, often the earliest, of the district to which it refers; scarcely one which does not suggest matters very interesting to the local antiquary, affording light, or requiring illustration. But such pleasant occupation must be left to the topographer of the district, who can, by the help of these documents, follow an ancient boundary through the changes of some centuries, discover the strength of the old Norman baron, or his chapel of forgotten reverence, among corn fields and mountain pastures, and trace the settlement and civilization of his country by marks that cannot deceive, though they have been overlooked.

A few circumstances connected with these records of a more general interest are all that can be here adverted to.

The monks of Neubottle were probably the first workers of coal in Scotland. Their own house is only divided by its little stream from a bank where coal was found so near the surface, and on such a declivity, as to be easily wrought, without mining or expensive operations for carrying off the water. Of the period when that bank of coal was worked and exhausted we find no record. But the charters of another property of the monastery seem to throw light upon this point. The first charter of the lands of Prestongrange to the Abbey is by Robert de Quinci, before the year 1189.¹ He grants the grange of Preston, of the territory of Tranent, by these boundaries: 'As the burn of Whytrig falls into the sea, on the east, to the marches of the Abbot of Dunfermling's lands of Inveresch and Ponttekyn (Pinkie), namely, as the rivulet runs from Fauside to the sea, and as I, in presence of good men, perambulated the march between my own mains and Medulfat, and east ditches for a memorial.' Along with valuable rights of pasture on the common of Tranent, and six acres of meadow in his meadow of Tranent, he granted to them twenty loads of peats from his own peatary, and fewel for the grange where the other men of the 'town' take their fewel. It seems clear that the fewel here meant is the peat and wood, or 'brush,' at that time used for all purposes of fire, and especially used to a great extent for the operation of salt-making in the immediate neighbourhood of the lands bestowed on the Abbey of Newbole. About ten years later, Seyer de Quinci, Earl of Winchester, the son of Robert, confirmed the grant of his father, without alteration; and the chartulary scribe notes that he gave four charters all in similar terms, differing only in their seals.² But in a very short time afterwards, Earl Seyer granted to the monks, in increase of his father's gift, the half nearest their own tilled land, of the marsh which stretches to the burn of Whytrig on the east, and also the coal work and quarry (carbonarium et quararium) between the said burn of Whytrig and the bounds of the lands of Ponttekyn and Inveresch, and in the ebb and flow of the sea; so that none of the Earl's men have any common right within the bounds of the grange of Preston, nor in the pasture, nor in the coal work, nor in the quarry.³ The boundaries towards the east and west seem to be the same with those by which the lands of the monks

It would have gratified the antiquary if our scribe had described these seals.

² No. 65. The change of seals may have corresponded to the death of Seyer's father and his own creation as Earl of Winchester.

were of old perambulated by Robert de Quinci; and the grant of coal not earlier reserved or mentioned, leads to the conclusion that it had not been previously worked, or at least to such an extent as rendered the privilege important enough to form the subject of a grant by charter. The working at first must have been confined to the coal which showed itself on the surface or the sea-cliff; but as the nearest supply was exhausted, the seam was followed wherever the level allowed. It was through this same field that, in later times, the monks of Neubottle carried galleries and conduits for the discharge of the water, not only of their own mines, but of that which impeded the working of their neighbours, the monks of Dunfermline, in their coal field of Inveresch and Pinkie.¹

Against a grant of Philip de Evermel, the Lord of Lynton and Rouanno, the chartulary scribe has noted—mirabilis concessio. It gave the monks a right of pasture in Romanoeh for one thousand sheep and sixty cattle, and all their stud of mares.² But that grant was but a small part of the sheep-bearing possessions of Neubottle. The monks had, by the munificence of King Malcolm, a great territory in Clydesdale, the modern name of which, Monkland, preserves the memory of its ancient possessors. The original charter of those lands was still preserved in the early part of last century; and as it furnishes several witnesses omitted in the chartulary, and gives the names of places in a different shape, it has been considered proper to insert it, though it is evidently damaged in correctness and authority by passing through so many transcripts. It is here printed from a copy in the hand of General Hutton, bearing to be transcribed from a copy by Mr Dillon, who had taken it from ‘A copy in the possession of Mr Ray, Writer, Edinburgh,’ which was marked—“The Principal Charter sealed under the Great Seal for the time, in the hands of John Hamilton of Airdrie.”³

From the Lindsays, also, the Abbey received extensive grants in the high range of Crawford at an early period; and all these the monks turned to good account. We have seen that they carried on mining for lead, and they did so also, probably, for the small amount of the precious metals which that district has always been known to contain, and which might be worth the winning, when labour and subsistence were equally cheap. But the monks cultivated their Lanarkshire territories to better purpose than mining, as it was then practised. They kept the greater part in their own occupation. They had granges at each of their 'towns'—each grange the centre of a considerable agricultural establishment. It was of importance to preserve an open communication with those distant possessions, and the Register is full of transactions for that object, with the intermediate proprietors, whose grounds must be passed through. The grant of Alexander II., of licence to pass with cattle through any intervening ground, and to spend the night in the common pasture, saving corn and meadow,¹ was only a specification of an ancient common law right in Scotland. But the monks, being on good terms with their neighbours, accepted the right sometimes as a grace. Thus the knights of St John gave free passage through their bounds of Torpheehin; the De Boscos lords of Ogilface, through their land of Ogilface; the Le Chens through Strabrock; the Stewarts through the barony of Batheat; the lords of Dalnialoy through their territory. The family of Melville gave a very early licence of the same kind to the monks, 'going and returning between Neubotle and the Abbey lands in Clydesdale, of passing through their lands of Retrevyn, by the road they had used in times past, with their cattle and carriages; and also of unyoking their beasts from their waggons, and pasturing in the pasturage of that land as often as they required, avoiding corn and meadow, and of passing the night there, once in going and once in returning.' For this the monks were to pay yearly a new waggon, such as they manufactured for their own use in

Clydesdale—it is plain the monk's waggon was a model—laden with timber or building material of any kind.¹

The western possessions of Neubottle are not much adapted for agriculture, even with the improved management and probable improvement of climate of modern times. But it was well suited for rearing stock, and especially for wool-growing; and we have some curious evidence that the Abbey of Neubottle took a lead in producing the finest quality of wool grown in Scotland. A ledger has been preserved, by a fortunate accident, showing the transactions of Andrew Haliburton, a merchant at Middleburgh, and conservator of the Scotch privileges in the Low countries, at the end of the fifteenth century. His chief dealings were with his countrymen; and while he received lasts of salmon from the Bishop of Aberdeen, and a few other commodities from other correspondents, the staple of his exports from Scotland were wool and hides. Among many points of great interest, this merchant's book brings us acquainted with the quality and price of those articles as early as 1490; and at that time the wool of our Abbey not only ranked highest in price, but seems to have given a name for the highest quality of Scotch wool.²

The gift of the valley of the Lethan to the Abbey is very interesting. Alexander II. had married his second wife, Mary de Couci, on the 15th May 1239. His first marriage was childless. The hopes of the nation were fixed on the birth of an heir to the throne. The king had chosen the castle of Roxburgh as his residence for the time—a proof of the peace and confidence of that reign—and the queen was there preparing for her confinement. Many gifts conferred by Alexander II., and still more, his frequent residences at the Abbey, show his favour for Neubottle. It was an occasion to give rise to strong and solemn feelings of religion. On the last day of August 1241, the young Queen, looking to her time of peril, and impressed with the frail tenure of life, bequeathed her body to be buried in the church of Neubotle; and in anticipation of the customary oblation, the King granted to God and the church of St Mary of Neubotle, and the monks there serving God, in free, pure, and perpetual alms, the vale of Lethan, from the head of the burn of Lethan, with all the streams that flow into it: and that specially for providing for the monks a 'pittance' twice in the year, namely, on St Bartholomew's day, the birth-day of the king, and another on the feast of the nativity of the Virgin, a high solemnity in her Cistercian church.¹ Four days afterwards, on the 4th of September, the vows of the sovereigns, and the ardent wishes of a whole people, were crowned by the birth of a prince destined to continue the good rule and good fortune of his father.

And now for the completion of the vow. We know little of the history of Mary de Couci after the death of Alexander. Her second husband was John de Brieme (called also Jear d'Acre), son of the emperor of the shadowy empire of the East; but her subsequent life and the period of her death are alike unknown. It is stated, however, that she, with her brother, Enguerran de Couci,² visited Scotland in 1272, to place their young nephew, the heir of Guines, at the court of his cousin, the king of Scots. It may be that the queen-dowager never returned from Scotland. That seems were

² Fordun, x. 30. Enguerran, Mary's brother, the seventh lord of the old race of Couci, is chiefly known as a mighty hunter and preserver of his forests. He was happy in living in an age tolerant of that taste, and could indulge it more freely than our modern deer-preserving lords. Having met three young gentlemen of Flanders, students at the Abbey of Laon, trespassing on his land of Couci—he hanged them! The good king, St Louis, indeed, was very angry, and made the Lord of Couci pay heavily for the enjoyment of his right of property. His nephew, the young Enguerran de Guines, who, after his death, assumed the name and honours of De Couci, remained at the court of Alexander III., and there married Christian de Lindsay, the eldest of the heiresses partners of the estates of Balliol in Scotland, England, and France.

probable than that, having died in France, her body should have been brought hither after death. That she was ultimately entombed at Neubottle cannot be doubted. The same authority, already quoted from the poor notes of Father Hay, asserts almost as an eye-witness—‘In the midst of the church was seen the tomb of the queen of king Alexander, of marble, supported on six lions of marble. A human figure was placed reclining on the tomb, surrounded with an iron grating.’¹

Another lady of more slender fame, but also connected with the royalty of Scotland, found her last resting-place at Neubottle. The story is told in the Scala chronicle, but the knight of Heton’s French is hard reading, and the passage was long ago done into English by John Leland. ‘In the yere 1360, one Catarine Mortimer, a damoisel of London, was so beloved of Davy Bruise, king of Scottes, by acquaintaunce that he had in tyne of imprisonment with her, that he could not forbere her companie. Whereat the lordes of Scotland were angry, and causid one Richard de Hulle, a varlette of Scotland, to go to hur, as for businesse from Bruise, and he stikkid her, and killid her, evding from Melrose to Soltre: whereupon Bruise toke great dolor, and caused her to be buried honourably at Neubottle.’²

One or two charters connected with persons of historical importance may be briefly noticed. It is known that St Bride was the patron saint of the heroic family of Douglas, whose help they invoked in sudden peril, by whose name they vowed, on whose festival they dated their acts of munificence or charity, before whose altars they chose their graves. On St Bride’s day, or the 1st of February in the end of the year 1329, at the park of Douglas, the ‘good Sir James of Douglas,’ being then about to depart for the Holy Land with the heart of his royal master, bestowed on the monastery of Neubottle his half of the land of Kilmad, the other half of which it already possessed by gift of Roger de Quincei; while the monks, on their part, became bound to sing a mass at St Bridget's altar within their abbey church, on the feast of St Bridget, yearly for evermore, and to feed thirteen poor folk, that the saint might make special intercession with God for the weal of the good knight.¹

More than half a century later, when the old Grahams had left Dalkeith, and been succeeded by another race still more powerful and no less friendly neighbours to Neubotle, Sir James Douglas of Dalkeith made a will on the 30th September 1390, in which, commending his soul to God and the Blessed Virgin and All Saints, he ordered his body to be buried in the monastery of St Mary of Neubotle, beside his late companion;² Agnes of Dunbar, his first wife. At the same time, he bequeathed to the Abbey a 'nowche,' or jewel, of St John, worth forty marks, or its value, and in addition, £23 : 6 : 8, for the building of the church and wages of the masons employed upon it. For the service of the monks' refectory he gave twelve silver dishes, weighing eighteen pounds, six shillings sterling, enjoining his heirs to see that they should not be abstracted from the use of the refectory or sold. He left £10 to the monks to pray for his soul, and £26 : 13 : 4 for an offering, and lights and other necessaries for his funeral.³

Of existing families the largest benefactors of Neubotle were the Lindesays, already settled at Craufurd, from which they afterwards took their title. As if in recompense for that old munificence, the Abbey records now furnish the best proofs of their ancient pedigree. Generation after generation of these old lords of Craufurd granted and re-granted to their favourite monastery, parts of the lands which they held from Swan the son of Thor. Their charters are by far the earliest and most interesting documents for the history of that queaths the same sums to the monastery, he no longer appropriates a part to the building of the church, or the payment of the workmen. Perhaps the rebuilding of the Abbey church had been completed in the meantime.—Ibid.

district. Their boundaries give names not again heard for centuries. They bestowed freely the lands, with all feudal privileges; only, the first granters reserved the game—salvis bestiis et avibus—reservatis feris et avibus; and the King, in confirming their grant, reserved his royalty of miles—salva nobis manerit si que in dicta terre inveniri poterit—till at length Gerard de Lindesay, confirming the grant of his grandfather, ‘in testimony of the peculiar favour he bore the house of Newbole,’ yielded, over and above, the much-valued rights of the forest—sine aliquo retinemento ferarum et avium; and the King, at his intercession, granted those lands in free forest, with all the forest privileges.

One of the documents here registered gives a perfect form of the mode of ‘extending,’ that is, valuing, land in the reign of Alexander II. The King issues his precept to John de Vaux, sheriff of Edinburgh, and Gilbert Fraser, sheriff of Traquair, to Heris, his forester, and Penycook, another officer, that they go in person to the ground, and there, by the oath of good and faithful men of the country, make be extended the pasture of Lethanhop, with its pertinents; and that extent made, that they inform the King, by letters under their seals, of the said extent and the yearly value of the said pasture.

The extent then made, when contrasted with the desolation caused by the senseless wars of later times, might naturally be called valor tempore pacis, until it passed even into legal style. Our chartulary scribe, whose notes are sometimes quaint and often instructive, has noted one or two cases that bring out the deterioration emphatically. He notices a property of the Abbey in Berwick which used to yield 40s. 8d., ‘but now destroyed and ruined to the foundation, and, in a manner, of no value.’ His next charter is a grant upon the Nes of Berwick, ‘beside the great houses of Melros.’ ‘Thus,’ says he, ‘in time of peace (tempore pacis), was for the proper benefit

(in proprios usus) of the monks, and it yielded a hundred shillings yearly: but now there is not one stone standing upon another.¹

The charters in the Appendix for the most part have reference to the possessions of Neubottle, or throw light on the granters or others commemorated in our register. It may be allowed to direct attention to one small series of these. William the Lion grants to Ailif, the king's baker, all the land which Reginald, the gate-ward of the castle of Edinburgh, held of the king, in Inverleith, to be held by the service of his own body in his office of baker. Nicholas, the son of Ailif, succeeded to his father in his office, and also in the lands held by him in Inverleith, which he also held by the service of his office, per servitium sui corporis, and with the privilege of grinding his corn at the king's mill without molture. In the reign of Alexander II. Nicholas resigned these lands of the hereditary bakers, in favour of the family of St Clair of Roslin, and they appear in the later titles of that noble house by the name of 'the Baxter-lands of Inverleith' a name which may be still known to some who do not dream that it is derived from their most ancient tenure.

Of the architecture of the Monastery of Neubottle, literally nothing more is known from records or chronicles than the meagre and half authentic particulars collected by Father Hay. We have proof enough, indeed, of the extent of the Abbey buildings. To accommodate eighty monks and seventy conversi, with their retainers,—to entertain, as the Abbey often did, the Bishop, and the whole synod of his diocese,—to receive the Sovereign and his court—for there is scarcely a king from its saintly founder downwards who was not frequently received at Neubottle²—must have required a large and spacious edifice. It happens that in contemporary writers the Abbey buildings are scarcely ever mentioned but to record their destruction.

² We learn this partly from the continual occurrence of the place in the dates of their charters. Alexander II. seems to have been especially fond of the seclusion of the convent by the Est.

They were burnt by Richard in 1385. They were burnt again by the Earl of Hertford in 1544. 'Upon the 15 day of May the horsmen raid to Newbottill and brynt it; and owersaw Dalkeith be the moyane of George Dowglas; and brynt many uther tounes thairabout. Na skaith was done to any kirkis exceptand thair destroyit the abbay of Newbottill. And the same nycht thair returnit to Leith.'¹

The burning of such a pile of masonry was perhaps but a partial destruction. Certain it is, that in a few years after the English Lieutenant's rough handling, the Abbey buildings were sufficiently restored to be thought a convenient place for the reception of a great assembly, since the Queen dowager, in person, held there a convention of the Lords of her party, preparatory to declaring war with England, in 1557. The subsequent disappearance of the ancient Abbey buildings cannot be accounted for in the common way, by alleging the violence of the reforming mobs. The Abbot of Newbottle entered so heartily into the Reformation, that his dwelling must probably have been respected by the most zealous iconoclasts; and as it seems to have been a dwelling for his descendants continuously, we must rather seek the cause in their preference of modern comforts to the picturesque architecture and the historical and pious associations of the old Abbey.

The present house is, to outward appearance, of the style of the middle of last century, with an addition made quite recently; and however much we may wonder that the minister of the parish, living in the village, should make no allusion to anything more ancient in its structure, we cannot be surprised at the author of 'Caledonia' following him in stating that 'the buildings of the Abbey have been long obliterated by the erection on their site of the modern mansion of the Marquis of Lothian that is called Newbottle Abbey.'² It requires a close inspection to correct this mistake. The present house occupies, indeed, a portion of the area of the ancient monastery; but, though ingeniously hidden, and the exterior broken into modern-shaped windows, the old work, the unmistakable ancient masonry, is still visible in parts of the walls; and here and there an antique moulding peeps out from the screen of coarser modern art. In the interior the whole ground floor is exceedingly interesting. Broken by modern passages, and modern windows and chimneys, intersected by the whole region of kitchen and cellar, there is yet to be traced from side to side of the house, a series of vaulting, perhaps a sort of crypt used to raise the building beyond the danger of the overflowing river. Several portions of the vaulting are very perfect, and by the liberty of supposing a thin partition removed which only partially conceals some of the pillars, the view of a part of it on the south side of the house, next the river, is obtained, which is given in the frontispiece.¹ The details of the very unadorned architecture bear the 'Early English' character, and they have been assigned by the highest authority¹ to the middle of the thirteenth century,—proving that the sub-structure at least of the old Abbey survived the successive burnings of invading armies, and that it was for a higher or a different part of the building that Sir James of Douglas made his bequest in 1390, and Edward of Crechton, in 1419, paid a sum ‘for the restoring and building of the monastery.’²

It can scarcely be affirmed that the part of the ancient work remaining formed any portion of the Abbey Church. The church, with its cemetery, has been effectually obliterated, and it is beneath the flower-plots or the smooth turf of the modern garden, that Queen Mary de Couci rests, and Sir Alexander de Ramsay,³ and Sir James of Douglas, and many another lady and lord of Lothian.

Since the preceding sheets were sent to press, Dr Bandinell, with great courtesy, has procured in Oxford the work of Manrique, of which there is no copy in the Bodleian library, and has enabled me to ascertain that Father Hay must have derived his meagre notes of the convent history from another source. The only passage in Manrique’s Annales Cistercienses in which Nebothe is mentioned, is under the year 1140: ‘De Nebothe alias de Nebothel (nam Obacium transeo quia recentiorum) liber taxarum mentiat et domum ait in regno Scotie sitam, Suthandrange diocesis, centum non amplius florenorum taxa prefixa. De eo Nicolaus Arspheidius hæc pauca scribit—Nebotel (alias Nebothe) in Lavtonia (alii in Lothiana)

Unfortunately, Manrique did not live to continue his annals so low down, and the later history of Newbattle, which he might perhaps have drawn from better sources than Boece and Leslie, is not touched by him.

At the lower end of the lawn which now stretches to the eastward of Newbattle Abbey, and of which a large part may have been once filled with the buildings of the monastery, the river is spanned by a fine old bridge of one circular arch with plain square ribs, much weather-worn.
